A Baby's Feet.

I.

A baby's feet, like sea-shells pink,
Might tempt, should heaven see meet,
An angel's lips to kiss, we think,
A baby's feet.

Like rose-hued sea-flowers toward the heat,
They stretch and spread and wink
Their ten soft buds that part and meet.

No flower-bells that expand and shrink,
Gleam half so heavenly sweet
As shine on life's untrodden brink,
A baby's feet.

II.

A baby's hands, like rosebuds furled,
Whence yet no leaf expands,
Ope if you touch, though close upcurled,
A baby's hands.

Then fast as warriors grip their brands
When battle's bolt is hurled,
They close, clenched hard like tightening bands.

No rosebud yet by dawn impearled,
Match, even in loveliest lands,
The sweetest flowers in all the world—
A baby's hands.

III.

A baby's eyes, ere speech begin,
Ere lips learn word or sighs,
Bless all things bright enough to win.
A baby's eyes.

Love, while the sweet thing laughs and lies,
And sleep flows out and in,
Sees perfect in them Paradise,
A baby's eyes.

Their glance might cast out pain and sin,
Their speech make dumb and wise,
By mute, glad godhead felt within
A baby's eyes.—Swinburne.

COUSIN ROLF.

"Get out, you old scamp!"

It was a brilliant July day, with skies of cloudless blue, the air scented with clover blossoms, and the brook wending its melodious way under green masses of peppermint; and Mr. Carey, who had walked a long distance, and had just fallen into a doze, under the refreshing shadow of a gnarled old apple-tree, started galvanically up at this ungentle address.

"Ma'am," said he, "I assure you I am not trespassing; I—"

But his apologetic words were cut short by the rattling of a stout stick on the stone wall, close to him; and in another moment, a belligerent-looking red cow, came plunging through the high grass, directly toward his haven of refuge.

He started to run, but his foot catching in the gnarled root of an ancient tree, he fell headlong. The cow executed a hurdle leap over his prostrate form, and vanished in a clump of hazel bushes; and a resolute, bright-eyed woman, of some forty odd years, came to the rescue, with a flapping sunbonnet tied over her ears, and the stick balanced across her shoulders.

"Don't strike!" pleaded Mr. Carey, "I'm getting off the premises as fast as I can. I assure you, I didn't know I was trespassing."

Desire Welland blushed very prettily, as she pushed back the sunbonnet, and endeavored to adjust her luxuriant red-brown hair, which had broken loose from its pins.

"Oh, I'm so sorry!" said she. "It wasn't you I meant at all, sir; it was the cow who had got into the cabbage-patch. Did I hit you with the stick? But I never dreamed of any one but Bossy being there. Oh, do let me run home and get the camphor bottle?"

Slowly, Mr. Carey raised himself to sitting and then to a standing posture; slowly he felt his knees, elbows and collar-bones.

"I'm not hurt," said he—"not to signify, that is. It wasn't your stick, ma'am; it was the roots of this old tree. It's enough to startle any man, don't you see? to hear himself called—an old scamp."

"But it wasn't you I meant," breathlessly cried Desire; "it was the old cow. Won't you let me run up to the house and get a capcine plaster? Oh, do."

Desire was fair to look upon, in spite of her forty summers, with big black eyes, a laughing cherry-red mouth and cheeks just browned with the healthful hue of mountain breezes. Mr. Carey felt himself gradually softening as he looked at her.

"No," said he. "I don't care for a capcine plaster. But I've walked a good way, and I should like a bowl of coffee if it's handy."

"Oh, pray come up to the house then," said Desire. "It's only a step across the orchard. Oh, that cow, that cow! We must certainly have her hampered after this!"

"Perhaps," said Mr. Carey, solemnly, as he endeavored to straighten the edges of his hat, "you know a family by the name of Welland who live hereabouts. Two old maids, who manage a farm all by themselves. Very peculiar females, I am told."

Desire stood still and began to laugh, while the deep crimson suffused her cheeks.

"Why," cried she, "it us. It's me and Malvina. We are the Welland girls."

It was Mr. Carey's turn to flush and look awkward now.

"Oh!" said he. "Well, it don't matter. I've business at the Welland farm—that's all."

"Isn't it strange that things should happen so?" cried Desire, opening the gate into the dim, shadowy orchard, where scarlet lilies grew in the tall grass, and robins darted in and out of the drooping boughs. "There's the house. You can see it now. Malvina and I have managed the farm ever since father died. Philo—that's our brother—has a house and an estate of his own, and his wife don't want any single relations. But we've done very well, every one says. Here's the place. And here's Malvina!"

Miss Malvina Welland was diligently hoeing sweet corn in a man's hat and boots. She was a tall, Amazonian sort of female, with high cheek-bones, hair cut short, and a masculine way of leaning on her hoe. She looked sharply around at the sound of footsteps.

"Is it the new hired man?" said she. "Then, Desire, you may tell him that we don't want help that comes at this time of day. I'll have no eight-hour men on my place."

"Oh, Malvina, hush!" cried the younger sister, in despair. "It's a gentleman on business."

In came Brother Philo from the back yard, with an auger in his hand

"Eh?" said Brother Philo, a wrinkled hard-featured man in a blue overall, and boots that looked as if they might have been carved out of lignum vitæ. 'Bus iness? It ain't a sewin'-machine I s'pose? or a new patent reaper, nor any o' these labor-savin' humbugs? Because—"

"It's about your Cousin Rolf," said Mr. Carey—"Paul Welland's son. He' come back from Australia. He requested me to come over here, as I happened to be passing this way, and see what his relations would do about giving him a home."

At these words, Mrs. Philo Welland emerged from the currant-bushes, where she was picking the sparkling, ruby-colored fruit to make jelly. For Mrs. Philo believed in always picking her neighbor's fruit before she began on her own.

"A home, indeed!" said Mrs. Philo "It's what I always told you, Philo! Says I, that man'll be sure to come back some day, poorer than poverty says I. And he'll expect us to take care of him then. But we've worked a deal too hard for our money—me and Philo—and if he wants to be supported, let him just go to the poor-house. Paul Welland always was a rovin' creetur', and Rolf ain't no better, I'll go bail!"

Mr. Philo Welland screwed up his face into an expression of the utmost caution.

"P'r'aps you're his lawyer, sir?" said he.

Mr. Carey nodded.

"I act for him," said he.

"Then tell him," said Philo, succinctly, "that if he expects we're goin' to support him, he's conside-a-bly mistook! We've always took care of ourselves; he can do the same! Come, Betsey, we'd better be goin'!"

"Philo!" cried out Desire; "how can you be so selfish? Rolf Welland is our cousin. If he is in want or trouble, whom has he to look to but us? Malvina, you won't be so hard-hearted? The old farm-house is big enough for our Cousin Rolf as well as for us. You never would turn a sickly old man adrift upon the world?"

"No, I wouldn't!" said Miss Malvina, thumping her hoe upon the ground. "Look here, stranger, tell Rolf Welland he's welcome to a home with us. We live plain, but we're ready to give him a hearty welcome. Tell him to come here at once. The sooner the better!"

"Women is fools," incidently remarked Philo Welland, chewing a stalk of currant leaves. "If you lost what little you've got, do you s'pose this relative o' yourn would raise a finger to help you? Let every man take care of himself, say I!"

"And who knows," cried Desire, brightly. "Perhaps we can get him the district school school to teach? I heard Squire Loames say that the new teacher wasn't going to stay more than a quarter longer."

"I'm glad you can afford to take free boarders," said Mrs. Philo, acidly. "Me and your brother—we can't!"

"Do come in, now, and get the coffee," said Desire. "And a few late strawberries, Mr.—Mr.—"

"Carey is my name," said the stranger, who had stood immovable beneath the fiery hail of this conversational episode. "That is to say, it is my name now. I chanced to make myself useful to a rich old gentleman in the East, who took a fancy to me, and left me his property in his will. The only condition appended was that I should take his name in addition to my own. And Carey isn't a bad name."

"Certainly it ain't," said Philo, with watering eyes. "I only wish we had a few of that sort of old gentlemen out this way. I'd change my name half a dozen times a day if it would be any accommodation to 'em. So you're rich, eh? Betsey,"—to his wife—"if this gentleman would be so kind as to come and take dinner with us to-day—"

"No," said the stranger, in a clear, decisive voice. "Will you be so kind as to hear me out? Carey, as I have already told you, is only my adopted name. My real name is Rolf Welland.'

"What!" roared Philo.

Mrs. Philo scrambled so hastily to her feet that she upset the pail, half full of currants. Miss Malvina dropped her hoe; and Desire, who had just brought out a little saucer of late, luscious, red strawberries stood amazed at this revelation.

"You!" she cried, "our Cousin Rolf! And I nearly hit you with the stick, chasing the cow, and half startled you out of your senses, and—"

"And taught me," said the old bachelor, with a strangely-sweet smile, "that there is yet left a spice of unselfishness in the conglomerate called human nature. Cousin Desire, I thank you for the lesson. Believe me, I shall not soon forget it!"

And before the day was over, he had helped Miss Malvina finish her patch of sweet-corn, and mended the defective fence-rails where the offending cow had broken through, besides staking up the sweet-williams, and nailing the big rose-tree to the frame from whence its over-blossoming weight had dragged it.

"I declare," said Miss Malvina, "he's a real comfort about the place!"

"And he has traveled so much!" cried Desire; "and he talks so beautifully! I only hope he'll be contented here!"

There was no sort of doubt about that. Rolf Welland Carey was very well contented. He had always hungered and thirsted for the details of a home life—here it was to perfection.

But Mr. and Mrs. Philo were not so well suited. All their spasmodic efforts toward friendliness were checked with Arctic frigidity.

"It's too bad!" said Mrs. Philo, almost crying. "He'll be certain sure to go and make a fool of himself by marrying Desire, and we shall never get a cent of his money. Desire ought to be ashamed to think of such a thing at her age!"

But Desire was only forty, and there are late roses as well as early ones. At least, so Mr. Welland thought. At all events, he married Desire, and the Philo Wellands were disconsolate.

"It's all our bad luck!" said they.

For they had forgotten all about the passage in the Bible that speaks of "entertaining angels unawares!"—Helen Forrest Graves.

Bird-Eating Frog.

The following curious narrative is taken from the Cape Times, (South Africa.) A lady living in the George district supplies the following particulars of the habits of this creature:

"I have much pleasure in furnishing all the information we have regarding the large frogs which have proved so destructive to our young chickens. A water sluit runs round our terrace, and passes through the ground where the poultry range, and in this the frogs harbor. The first time our attention was drawn to their bird eating propensity was by the cries of a small bird in a fuchsia near the stream. Thinking it had been seized by a snake, several hastened to the spot, and saw a beautiful red and green sugar bird in the mouth of a large greenish frog; only the bird's head was visible; and its cries becoming fainter, the frog was killed and the bird released. Its feathers were all wet and slimy, and for some days we could distinguish it in the garden by its ruffled plumage.

Since then the same species of frog have on several occasions been killed with young chickens half swallowed, and once a duckling was rescued from the same fate. Whether the noise is natural to these frogs, or assumed to decoy the chickens within their reach, we know not; but they constantly make a chuckling sound so exactly like a hen calling her chickens for food that we have seen whole broods deceived, and rushing toward the sluit where they supposed the hen to be. The frogs are very wary, and it is difficult to find them except by the screams of their victims. We have lost large numbers of small chickens in an unaccountable manner, and now feel sure that these frogs must be answerable for very many of them, as there are no rats here, and the chickens are carefully housed at night."

SIGN LANGUAGE.

The Manner in Which Deaf and Dumb People Talk.

No one seeing the sign language can help admiring its beauty and gracefulness. This language is very simple, and any one taking the trouble to study it with one of the speaking employes at the asylum who is acquainted with it, could soon acquire it. It is universal among mutes, and is founded upon the most natural and convenient way of imitating the forms of objects spoken of, or making some sign which suggests some quality or trait of it, whenever this is possible. Here are a few examples of the way different things are expressed:

Dog—Slap the right thigh just above the knee with the right hand (as if inviting a dog to come to you).

Girl—Close the right hand, leaving the thumb sticking out. Pass the thumb over the cheek a few times, downward strokes (indicating, perhaps, "no beard.")

Boy—Close and open the thumb of the right hand against the fingers rapidly several times near and in front of the forehead, the back of the hand being upward.

Man—Same sign, and immediately raise the hand high above the head (indicating "high boy.")

House—Touch the points of the extended fingers and draw both hands obliquely down, the right toward the right, and the left toward the left, as if describing the roof.

Hat—Take off the hat and put it on again. If you happen to have none on, go through the motion with the empty hand.

Boot—Extend the second finger of both hands and draw up the leg, as if pulling on a boot.

Book—Press the fingers of each hand together, and the thumbs against the first fingers, place the lower edges of the hands together, and open and shut as a book.

Cat—Move the hands as if pulling a mustache on both sides.

Englishman—Grasp the edge of the left hand back of the little finger with the right hand, the back of both being up.

German—Extend the fingers of both hands and cross the edges of the wrists, the right one up; shake the fingers slightly.

Columbus—Crook the thumb and fingers of the right hand to form the letter C, and shake the hand.

Deaf and Dumb—Place the first finger on the right hand to the lips and then to the ear.

State House—Place the first fingers of both hands to the right and left temples respectively, and make the sign of house, described above.

Penitentiary—Cross the open fingers of both hands to make bars, and pass the hands across the sides to indicate stripes.

These signs are, of course, much simpler than many others which must be seen to be described, but they serve to show hhe manner in which the system is formed. Abstract ideas are quite as easily and rapidly expressed, and it is astonishing to note the few verbs and adjectives it is necessary to spell out by letters in a long conversation. For instance, clapping the fingers of the right hand and the palm of the left means school; placing the palms and fingers of both hands together, prayer; waving the handkerchief in a crowd where deaf mutes are invariably collects them together; to point the fingers of the right hand at the open palm of the left and shake them commands pupils to study; touching the left palm with the fingers of the right hand and rapidly passing them towards the head a few times means to learn (that is, taking knowledge from a book into the head): passing the right palm over the upper end of the left fist means enough, or filled; pressing the first, second and third fingers of the right hand against the chin, with the thumb and small finger extended to the right and left respectively, means to make a mistake or be wrong, etc.—Ohio State Journal.

Wanted the Boss.

A travelling man who makes yearly visits to a country store in Kentucky, drove up to the establishment the other day and asked to see the boss.

"How are you, Smith?" he said, when a very depressed looking man came to the door.

"How are you! Who did you want?

"I wanted to see the boss."

"All right, I'll call—"

"Why, ain't you the boss?"

"No; not any more," and he looked over his shoulder in a frightened way.

"You were when I was here a year ago."

"Yes, I know it, but you see I've got married since then."

There is no benefit so small that a good man will not magnify it.

A MIND OBSCURED.

A Man Once Insane Describes His Sensations.—Reason Regained After Twelve Years.

I was once insane and I often muse over my experience. There are, of course, many kinds of insanity. Some mental disorders take place so gradually that even the closest companions of the victim are at a loss to remember when the trouble began. It must have been this way in my case. One evening, after an oppressively warm day, a day when I experienced more fatigue from the heat than ever before or since, I sat on the porch fanning myself. "This arm that is now in motion," I mused, "must one of these days be dust. I wonder how long will the time be." Then I mused upon the evidence I had of immortality. I could do things that other people could not accomplish. I had gone through battle after battle, and though bullets sang and struck around me thick as hail, yet I remained uninjured. I had passed through epidemics of yellow fever. My idea gained strength as I mused, and I was convinced that I should live forever. No, this cannot be, for death follows all men alike. Yes, I am to die like other men, and I believe it is my duty to make the most of life; to make money, and enjoy myself and to educate my children. I wanted to be rich, and I began to study over an imaginary list of enterprises. At last I hit upon radishes. People must have radishes. They should be in every store. They could be dried and sold in winter. I would plant fifty acres with radish seed, and people all over the country would refer to me as the 'radish king.' I would form a radish syndicate, and buy up all the radishes, and travel around and be admired. I hastened to the house to tell my wife that she was soon to be a radish queen. At the breakfast table I said:

"Julia, how would you like to be a radish queen?"

"A what?" she exclaimed.

I explained my plan of acquiring great wealth, and during the recital she acted so curiously that I was alarmed. I feared that she was losing her mind. Finally she seemed to understand. She agreed with me, but told me not to say anything more about it. After breakfast I saw her talking earnestly with her father, and I knew that she was explaining to the old gentleman how she intended to pay his debts when I became known as the radish king. The old man approached me, with much concern, and told me that I needed rest, and that I must not think of business. He was old and sadly worried, and I promised him that I would not think of business. Pretty soon I went out to inspect my radish kingdom. Looking around I saw the old man following me. From the field I went to the village. I approached a prominent citizen, who had always been my friend, and told him how I intended to become rich. He seemed grieved, and I saw at once that he was contemplating the same enterprise. It seemed mean that he should take advantage of me, and I told him so. He tried to explain, but he made me so mad that I would have struck him if my father-in-law had not come up and separated us. I tried to calm myself, but could not. Those who had been my friends proved to be my enemies, and I was determined to be avenged, but before I could execute my will, I was seized by several men. My father-in-law did not attempt to rescue me, and I hated him. I was taken to jail. My wife came to see me, but she did not try to have me released. I demanded a trial, but no lawyer would defend me. Then I realized that the whole community was against me. I became so mad that my anger seemed to hang over me like a dark cloud. It pressed me to the floor and held me there. Men came after a long time, and took me away, I thought, to the penitentiary. One day a cat came into my cell, and I tried to bite it. She made the hair fly, but I killed her. I don't know how long I remained there, but one morning the sun rose and shone in at me through the window. It seemed to be the first time that I had seen the great luminary for months. A mist cleared from before my eyes. My brain began to work, and suddenly I realized that I had been insane. I called the keeper, and when he saw me, he exclaimed: "Thank God!" and grasped my hand. I was not long in putting on another suit of clothes, and turning my face toward home. A physician said that I was cured, and everybody seemed bright and happy at my recovery. I boarded a train with a gentleman, and went home. My wife fainted when she saw me and learned that I had recovered my mind. I asked for my little children and two big boys and a young lady came forward and greeted me. I had been in the asylum twelve years.—Colonel Weekley, in Arkansas Traveller.

Gloves remain very long wristed,

AMERICAN GIRLS AND TITLES.

Unfortunate Alliances Which are Made With Alleged Noblemen of Foreign Lands.

Writing from London to the Detroit Post, W. A. Croffut says: If I felt free to mention names I could tell tales to wring the heart, about American girls who have married English noblemen. In almost every instance it proves fatal to the bride's happiness. It isn't long since Lord Flyfinger married the heiress of an American Crœsus. There was a tremendous time about it. She was envied by all her marriageable cronies and old Crœsus was congratulated on the fine alliance. He grinned with self-complacency and handed over $1,500,000 to His Lordship Flyfinger on the spot: Flyfinger took the wife and the money and brought them to England, where he introduced her to a few acquaintances and then left her to shift for herself, while he travels with relays of fast horses, races and hunts, gambles and lives a wild life on the million and a half of money for which he sold the shelter of his title to a bright, hopeful, ambitious American girl.

Five or six years ago an American girl whose name was on all lips married a rich Englishman, who had the entree of high society in England She was feasted, toasted, envied. But she has slept in a social cocoon ever since, heartily wishing herself home not seeing for months sometimes the husband, who loves to follow the hounds.

An American gentleman living here whose name would be recognized by the reader if I were at liberty to mention it, told me yesterday: "I have been approached within a month by an English lord, who may be a duke some day, but whose fortune has become greatly impaired by his dissipation. He has fixed his eye on an American girl whom he has never seen. She is comparatively uneducated and not very bright and fearfully plain. Her nose is snub. Her mouth is large. Her eyes are small and watery. Her father is an Irishman. But he is worth at least $20,000,000. This lord wants me to bring about a match between himself and this girl. I'd see him hanged first, for I know what a sacrifice of her it would be."

One other case: There is a young lady now in high society in America, her native land, whose husband is an English lord and whose father-in-law is a duke. She is beautiful, accomplished, interesting, and she might have made a good match in New York. But she wanted a lord, and she got him. He inherited gambling from his mother, the duchess, and he gambles away all he can get. He is dissolute and unscrupulous; she is neglected and wretched. So she pays long visits to her relatives in America, where she can plunge into society and forget her pitiful European experiment.

A City of the Dead.

Two miles from Mandan, on the bluffs near the junction of the Heart and Missouri rivers, is an old cemetery of fully one hundred acres in extent, filled with bones of a giant race. This vast city of the dead lies just east of the Fort Lincoln road. We have just spent a half day in exploring this charnel house of a dead nation. The ground has the appearance of having been filled with trenches piled full of dead bodies, both man and beast, and covered with several feet of earth. In many places mounds from eight to ten feet high and some of them a hundred feet or more in length have been thrown up, and are filled with bones, broken pottery, vases of various bright colored flints and agates. The pottery is of a dark material, beautifully decorated, delicate in finish, and as light as wood, showing the work of a people skilled in the arts and possessed of a high state of civilization. Here is a grand field for the student, who will be richly repaid for his labors by excavating and tunneling in these catacombs of the dead. This has evidently been a grand battle-field, where thousands of men and horses have fallen. Nothing like a systematic or intelligent exploration has been made, as only little holes two or three feet in depth have been dug in some of the mounds, but many parts of the anatomy of man and beast, and beautiful specimens of broken pottery and other curiosities have been found in these feeble efforts at excavation. Who are they and from whence did they come, dying and leaving only these crumbling bones and broken fragments of their works of art to mark the resting place of a dead nation? Five miles above Mandan, on the opposite side of the Missouri, is another vast cemetery as yet unexplored. We asked an aged Indian what his people knew of these ancient graveyards. He answered; "Me know nothing about them. They were here before the red man."—Mandan, Dakota, Pioneer.

The Removal.

A nervous old gentleman, tired of trade,
By which, though it seems, he a fortune had made,
Took a house 'twixt two sheds, on the skirts of the town,
Which he meant, at his leisure, to buy and pull down.
This thought struck his mind as he viewed his estate;
But alas! when he entered he found it too late,
For in each dwelt a smith—a more hard-working two
Never hammered an anvil or put on a shoe.
At six in the morning, their anvils at work
Awoke our new 'Squire, who raged like a Turk.
"These fellows," he cried, "such a clattering keep,
I never can get above eight hours of sleep!"
His afternoon's nap and his daughter's new song
Were battered and spoiled by their hammers' ding dong!
At last, both his health and spirits to improve,
He cried, "I'll give each fifty guineas to move!"
"Agreed," said the pair; "that will make us amends"
"Then come home," said the Squire, "and let us part friends.
You shall eat, and we'll drink on that joyful occasion,
That each may live long in his new habitation!

* * * * * *

"Now tell," said the Squire, "where you each mean to move?
I hope to some place where his trade will improve!"
"Why, sir," replies one, with a grin on his phiz,
"Tom Forge moves to my shop, and I move to his!"

PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.

The early bud catches the worm.

Speaking of the avocations of the heavenly bodies, there is no doubt that the sun is a tanner.

The single eyeglass is worn by the dude. The theory is that he can see more with one eye than he can comprehend.

The engaged couple is not two souls with but a single thought, as is generally supposed. The thought about staying single never occurs to them.

"Ah! I'm saddest when I sing,"
She sung in plaintive key,
And all the neighbors yelled—
"So are we! So are we!"

"What is a color guard, papa?" the good boy asked. "A parasol and a veil, my son," and the boy silently wondered what soldiers wanted with such things.

A Western paper announces the fact that an acrobat turned a somersault on a locomotive smokestack. This is nothing. We know of an engineer who turned on the steam.

When one little boy runs away with another little boy's tart, the proper caper for another little boy to cut is to strike a stained glass attitude and warble, "Good-by, sweet-tart, good-by."

"There is one thing connected with your table," said a drummer to a Western landlord, "that is not surpassed by the best hotels in Chicago." "Yes," replied the pleased landlord; "and what is that?" "The salt."

"You must bathe regularly," said a physician, gravely, as he looked at the patient's tongue and felt his pulse. "But, doctor, I do," returned the sick man, "I go in swimming regularly every Fourth of July."

Honored for Their Deeds.

A peasant was one day driving some geese to a neighboring town where he hoped to sell them. He had a long stick in his hand, and to say the truth, he did not treat his flock of geese with much consideration. I do not blame him, however; he was anxious to get to the market in time to make a profit, and not only geese but men must expect to suffer if they hinder gain.

The geese, however, did not look on the matter in this light, and happening to meet a traveller walking along the road they poured forth their complaints against the peasant who was driving them.

"Where can you find geese more unhappy than we are? See how this peasant is hurrying on this way and that, and driving us just as though we were only common geese. Ignorant fellow as he is, he never thinks how he is bound to honor and respect us; for we are the distinguished descendants of those very geese to whom Rome once owed its salvation, so that a festival was established in their honor."

"But for what do you expect to be distinguished yourselves?" asked the traveller.

"Because our ancestors—"

"Yes, I know; I have read all about it. What I want to know is what good have you yourselves done?"

"Why, our ancestors saved Rome."

"Yes, yes; but what have you done of the kind?"

"We? Nothing."

"Of what good are you, then? Do leave your ancestors at peace. They were honored for their deeds; but you, my friends, are only fit for roasting."

GOVERNOR PATTISON is daily in receipt of letters from prominent citizen all over the state endorsing his course in calling an extra sesion of the legislature. It is well understood throughout that the Governor performed a plain duty, and if the party bosses in the senate defeat the object for which they were called together it will be no fault of Governor Pattison.

THE Lewisburg Journal says that Hon. C. S. Wolfe will not support the republican state ticket. He is decidedly opposed to the platform and says that Niles' nomination smacks too much of ring influence. while Livsey is the creature of Chris. Magee. This shows that the independent chieftain of Union county does not show the white feather as easily as senator Stewart.

OUR legislature is very busily engaged in sessions of about half an hour a day in preventing apportionment. By their self-sacrificing labors they earn the lasting gratitude of the happy tax-payers, considering that they must shift along as best they can with only ten dollars a day.

The Philipsburg Journal very pertinently asks:

WHAT has become of the law which was to crush out polygamy and make the Mormon mourn? Never in the history of their church have the Latter Day Saints prosperous as they do now. Their missionaries are not only more active in this country than ever before but they are making converts abroad by the thousand. Nearly seven hundred Mormon recruits landed in New York last Sunday a week, and they are all representated to be thrifty and well-to-do emigrants. It really looks as if the Government is not in earnest in its effort to eradicate the twin relic.

What the New York Editors say.

Dana, Reid and Hastings on the Presidential Nomination.

Interviews in New York Herald.

DANA DECLINES TILDEN.

I cannot conceive of any intelligent mind believing for an instant that Mr. Tilden would again consent to be a candidate. It is absolutely out of the question. Nothing on earth could induce him to run again.

REID SQUINTS TOWARD ARTHUR.

Since he gave up leadership of a faction he has steadily grown and is very much stronger than he was. The people saw what he did and applauded and sympathized with him. He stands better to-day before the country than at any previous period in his whole official life.

HASTINGS GIVES ARTHUR A WALK-OVER.

Arthur is making effort. He needs to make none. Events are shaping things for him. Cornell is a dead dog. He has a few friends, but no patronage. He has had his day. They are all out. Blaine is out. Sherman is out. Conkling is out and means to keep out. Really, Arthur seems to have a walk-over.

The Democratic Delegate Election and County Convention.

The Democratic voters of Centre County will meet at the regular places of holding the general election for their districts on Saturday, August 11th 1883 to elect delegates to the Democratic County Convention. The Election will open at two o'clock P. M., and close at six P. M.

The delegates chosen at the above time will meet in the Court House at Bellefonte on Tuesday, August 14th, at 2 o'clock P. M., to nominate one candidate for district Attorney, one candidate for County Surveyor and to transact such other business as the interests of the party may demand.

The number of delegates to which each district is entitled is as follows.

The Government's Faith and the Trade Dollar Victims.

From the North American.

The government is bound to redeem the trades is circulation here as a matter of honor and public policy. Though it never paid out or received a single coin as cash, it puts its seal upon the coin and the speculators did the rest. The speculators could not have circulated the trade dollar here but for the Mint stamp. Hence the government is bound to relieve the victims of the delusion.

The Strike Partly Ended.

The American Rapid Telegraph Company have compromised with their operators, granting all their demands excepting only an advance of 10 per cent. on wages, instead of 15, as demanded. The operators have all gone to work again.

The Western Union and the Baltimore & Ohio companies have not yet made any concession to their men, who are still out. Great uneasiness is manifested in commercial and business circles over the attitude of these companies and public sympathy seems to be entirely with the operatives.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

—Tramps are still willing to take the trade dollar at face value.

—Neighbor B. F. Miller last week moved into the suburb called Louisville.

—A number of Aaronsburg's best looking lads and lasses are attending Rev. Herald's select school here.

—Mrs. Hannah Miller will make sale of the personal effects of the late William Miller, deceased, August 25 h. See bills.

—☞ Trade Dollars will be received at the JOURNAL OFFICE at 100 cents on the dollar on arrearages of subscription.

—Whortleberries are only five cents and blackberries but four cents a quart, at Middleburg. Can't you send some up this way, Tom?

—The season is here when the little urchin tries ever so hard by means of green apples to make a doctor bill for his daddy to pay.

—There is no purifier like fresh air; and the whole house, every room in it, whether it has been used or not, should be opened every day.

—Mr. C. A. Ressam is hereby tendered the thanks of the senior editor and family for a fine "mess" of fish. They were simply herrlich.

—A few days of good, dry weather has enabled our farmers to house their grain safely in the barns. Some of it is a little sprouted but not materially damaged.

—Do not forget Dr. P. T. Musser's sale of real estate of the late John D. Foote, dec'd, next Tuesday. Some first class properties can be obtained at reasonable prices.

—Mr. Edward H. Frank has returned from the west and is now engaged as salesman in Tomlinson's store. Edward is an efficient clerk and a most examplary young man.

—Chairman Heinle gives notice that the Democratic delegate elections will be held, Saturday, Aug. 11th, and that the county convention will meet next Tuesday following, the 14th.

NOTICE.—A large number of borough orders are in my possession. Persons entitled to them are requested to call and lift them.

R. A. BUMILLER,
Clerk of Council.

—Little Laurelton is to have a spacious new brick school house with two rooms below and a town hall above. The primary department will be for the children of the district and the others for the advanced pupils of the whole township.

—Mr. T. G. Erhard and lady returned from their extended Kansas trip on Saturday evening "safe and sound." They did not however get through Millheim as easily as they may have expected, for every man, woman and child wanted to see the prairie dog they had along.

—Our young friend, E. W. Mauck, is by many odds the best painter and paperhanger in this vicinity. He has just finished a job for us and we must say that his graining and decorating is simply splendid. We advise our readers to employ him if they wish to have a first-class job in all respects.

—J. H. Reifsnyder, Esq., is off to Harrisburg attending the Democaatic State Convention as one of the delegates of the county. He is ably flanked by the following gentlemen as subdelegates: Hon. W. K. Alexander, Councilman Springer, Sheriff Foust, P. H. Stover, Esq., and Mr. A. J. Immel.

—A very fine monument, to be placed at the grave of the late John Shannon, Esq., at Centre Hall, can now be seen at the Millheim Marble Works. It is a fitting and creditable tribute to the memory of an esteemed citizen and beloved father, by his only surviving child, Mrs. Rev. T. F. Dornblaser, of Topeka, Kansas.

—STRAYED OR STOLEN, from the residence of the subscriber in Aaronsburg, on the 31st of May last, a dark red cow, with a little white along the belly and from rump to tail, medium size, heavy set and short legged, and heavy with calf at the time. Any information that leads to the recovery of the cow will be liberally rewarded by CHARLES C. BELL.

A BIT OF DOG LAW.—If anybody is attacked on the highway by a dog the party has a right to kill the dog and the owner can be held accountable for any injury inflicted by the animal. Even on his own premises the owner of a dog can be held responsible for injuries done by the animal, provided it can be shown that the person injured was there for proper purposes. If a dog by barking at passing horses or vehicles occasions any damage, its owner is liable for the loss sustained. Thus the law very plainly affords ample protection for loss or injury caused by dogs.

—Mr. John Rishel, of Potter township, gave us a friendly call last week. Mr. Rishel is a candidate for Associate Judge and is out shaking hands with friends. He is one of the most intelligent farmers in Centre county and possesses all the qualifications for the office. If we mistake not he was born in the county and spent all his life time here.

—J. A. LIMBERT will carry express and freight goods from Coburn to any point along the route at the following rates: All packages weighing less than 100 pounds, to Millheim, 10 cts., to Aaronsburg, 15 cts., to Woodward, 25 cts. For packages weighing over 100 pounds a proportionate charge will be made. tf

—The following is the Watchman's sure cure for diarahoea:

Take equal parts of tincture of rhubarb, essence of peppermint, and spirits of camphor. Mix well. Dose, fifteen to thirty drops in a wineglass of water, according to age and violence of the attack. Repeat every fifteen or twenty minutes until relief is obtained.

—J. K. Smith & Co., the popular house furnishing firm of Milton, last week delivered some very fine furniture and carpets for S. D. Musser, R. A. Bumiller and others. Mr. Smith, the head man of the enterprising firm was here himself and reports an increasing trade in this neighborhood, largely due to regular and liberal advertising in the JOURNAL.

—The Bellefonte papers have it that the Buffalo Run Rail Road is soon to pass into the hands of the Pennsylvania company, which circumstance is of interest to the people of this end of the county only so far as it may affect the extension of the L. & T. road to a connection with the Buffalo Run at Lemont. What is the company going to do about it?

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.—Mrs. Hugh Martin, of Mount Eagle, near Milesburg, while on the mountain the other Friday had with her a son aged about 8 years, named Willie. The little fellow climbed on top of a rock, which weighed about a ton. The rock for some reason started to roll, threw him off and passed over his body, breaking both legs, and neck. The agonized mother carried the lifeless body to a neighboring colliery and from there it was taken home by Mr. Hugh Shultz.

—The Mountain Union Sunday Schools in Gregg towdship will hold its annual picnic in John Grove's woods near the residence of Benjamin Ripka, where it was last year, on Saturday August 25th. The George's Valley Union School, Locust Grove Evangelical School, Liberty Union School and Paradise Evangelical School are expected to be present. The Millheim Cornet Band has been engaged. Rev. Benj. Hengst will deliver the address.

The public is cordially invited to attend.

—When our business men get a letter or a bill from a foreign firm, with neither letter or bill-head printed, nor the envelope inprinted, the natural conclusion is that the firm sending it is a poor, one-horse concern. And again, that is just what other houses think of our business men when they correspond with them in that style. At this office you can get letter-heads, bill-heads, statements, envelopes, cards, ect., printed in the latest style, and at a little more than the cost of the blank stationery.

—There is not a man, woman or child in this entire region that did not at some time enjoy and admire the music rendered by the Millheim Cornet Band. Most of our people have had this pleasure very frequently. The boys now have everything necessary for successful work—a splendid wagon, fine uniforms, etc. A little debt however burdens them and this they propose to pay with the proceeds of their festival on Saturday. It will be but an act of justice if this community give them a liberal patronage, and we trust it may be done.

—A judicial apportionment bill has at last been passed by both houses of the legislature and only needs the Governor's signature to make it a law. Center county is joined to Union and Snyder into one district, which makes Judge Bucher the President Judge, while Judge Orvis status will be the same as before. The new district gave sixty-five republican majority last year—counting stalwarts and independents together. It is now just such a district as give the best man the best chance to win.

—Our valued friend, Mr. J. R. Van-Ormer, of the Bellefonte Democrat, bids an affectionate farewell in last week's paper to the readers and patrons of the Democrat. He expects to enter another field of labor "less extensive but more congenial" as he aptly puts it in his neat valadictory.

We sincerely regret that Reese is going out of the profession, and much more that he expects to leave the county, as we hear from another source. Our acquaintance with him extends back over a number of years and has ripened into warm friendship. He has our best wishes in all the walks of future life.

—The Democratic state convention met at Harrisburg yesterday at 10 o'clock, just a few hours before we go to press. Hope the convention will nominate good, fit men and adopt a sound platform. With such premises success is all but certain.

A PLACE FOR TRADE DOLLARS.—If you have trade dollars on hand and are in need of clothing, hats, caps, boots and shoes, &c., just wend your way to Whitcomb's Mammoth store, Main street, Lock Haven, where you will be allowed in merchandise the face value of every trade dollar. Whitcomb is a square dealer and manages his business in such a way as to enable him to dispose of his goods at prices that cannot fail to please everybody. A visit to his store and a five minute talk with him will convince you of this fact. Main street, Lock Haven, Pa.—Jersey Shore Herald.

—THE HARVEST HOME PICNIC on Friday was well attended considering the fact that most of the grain in this section was yet standing on shocks. The Millheim and Brush Valley bands were on the grounds and both did their parts well. The refreshment stand did a thriving business, the amusements were well patronized and the day was spent pleasantly. Base ball and glass ball shooting were the principle features of attraction. The following are the scores of each as taken by the respective umpires, R. A. Bumiller and A. J. Campbell:

A Terrible Calamity.

Over Sixty People Drowned Near Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, July 24.

Black crape hangs from the door of many a house throughout Baltimore today. Upwards of sixty dead bodies, the result of an accident at the Tivoli picnic grounds, are awaiting burial. Tivoli is not far from North Point, on the Patapsco river, about ten miles from this city. It was formally known as Holly Grove and was the first regular excursion place fitted up near the city about fifteen years ago. At that time it was a popular place, but of late has lost considerable of its prestige. Yesterday there was an immense excursion to Tivoli, under the auspices of the Mount Royal Beneficial Society of the Catholic Church of Corpus Christi, of which Father Starr is pastor. The excursionists went down on the barge Cockade City, which was towed by the tug Amanda Powell. The barge was formerly an old canal boat, which had been fitted up with several decks for excursion purposes and used as such for several years. She made three trips to Tivoli yesterday, carrying down several hundred passengers altogether, who were gathered from all parts of the city.

ON THE RICKETY WHARF.

There is a long wharf at Tivoli, probably a thousand feet long. When the Cockade City reached the picnic grounds on the last trip down it was 10 o'clock at night. She was very late and the great body of excursionists were tired of waiting. Between 150 and 200 of them pressed upon the wharf before the gate which guards the entrance to the wharf had been closed against them. The wharf was old and rickety and could not stand the weight of so many impatient people. Near the boat-end of the wharf is another gate. This was locked before more than a few people could get through and thus most of the excurtionists on the wharf were between the two gates. The Cockade City drew up to the pier and the gang plank was thrown across. Just then there was a crash, followed by loud shrieks and cries for help. Just where the great body of excurtionists had been standing there was a great, yawning hole. The wharf had given way and scores of excurtionists were struggling in the water.

STRUGGLING IN THE WATER.

The scene beggers description. The cries of the drowning men, women and children were heartrending. The moon had gone down and the only light was that shed by two feeble coal oil lamps. Some of the rescuers took the barge lanterns and set them on the wharf. Two of them exploded and added fresh terror to the scene. Those on the decks of the barge threw off preservers, stools and benches into the water. These struck a great many on the head and knocked them insensible. Others let down planks and ropes. An indescribable hopelessness and terror reigned. Shrieks, curses, groans mingled with cries of "God save us." In the midst of the awful confusion strong men fought their way out of the clutches of drowning women and children in their mad efforts to save their lives, only to be clutched again and again by some other unfortunate, and finally through sheer exhaustion going down with those who impeded their efforts in their attempts to save themselves by clinging to them. In this way many persons who could swim perished with those who could not. Those on the shore were panic-stricken. They could be seen tearing up and down the river bank, wringing their hands and almost frantic in their effort to find missing ones. It was an awful scene. There were but half a dozen cool heads in the lot. Those who kept their presence of mind aided in saving the struggling ones in the water and many were helped ashore. As soon as possible the Cockade City got off to the city with a number of the dead bodies, leaving hundreds of excursionists to spend the night on the river banks, searching for others of the dead.

Sweet Peas.

"Please wear my rose-bud for love, Papa,"
Said Phebe with eyes so blue.
"This sprig of myrtle put with it, Papa,
To tell of my love," said Prue.
Said Patience, "This heart's-ease shall whis per, Papa,
Forget not my love is true."

Papa looked into the laughing eyes,
And answered to each little girl's surprise:
"My darlings, I thank you, but dearer than these,— Forgive me,—far dearer, are bonnie sweet peas."
Then he clasped them close to his heart so true,
And whispered, "Sweet P's,—Phebe, Patience, and Prue!"

The Gorilla.

The gorillas are the terror of Africa. In the gorilla country no lion will live. They are man-haters and kill them for the love of it, leaving the body, never eating it. When they spy a negro they come down from a tree, hit him on the head with a club, which they wield with their hind claw, or carry him up into a tree, there to murder him. Their strength is so great that they will bend the barrel of a rifle. Only one live one was ever brought to England, and that soon died. Several have been shot, but they are tough customers, and the natives dread them more than any animal of the African forests. The gorilla makes a bed like a hammock, and swings in the trees. The gorilla is the sworn enemy of the elephant, because each derives subsistence from the same source. When he sees an elephant pulling down and wrenching off the branches of a favorite tree, the gorilla steals among the boughs, strikes the sensitive proboscis of the elephant a terrible blow with his club, and drives off the clumsy and startled giant, shrilly trumpeting his pain and rage through the jungles of the forest.

Brave and Tender.

When Sir John Lawrence was governor-general of India he was told one day of a little girl who had been taken ill, and was pining away with grief at the loss of a very curious pet. The pet was a tame ostrich, which the child had raised from the egg, left by the ostrich mother in the grass of the park at Barrackpore.

The little girl's father was the keeper of the park, and soon after her discovery of the egg he died and his successor was appointed.

Fearing that foxes or jackals would eat her treasure, or that the cold dews would destroy it, the little girl carried the big egg to the bungalow, and buried it safely in a lidless box filled with dry white sand. This she took pains to set out in the sun every day just where the fiercest rays would pour on it. At night she coaxed a motherly hen, whose own eggs she transferred elsewhere, to brood over the box.

By-and-by to the great fright of the poor hen, a giant chick broke the shell, and stepped into view. The hen ruffled her feathers, spread her wings, and fled.

The little girl and the ostrich became fast friends, and one was never seen without the other. What, then, was her dismay when the park-keeper took it into his head that the ostrich was public property, and must go to the government aviary!

The child was so distressed at the removal of her pet that her mother feared she would die. But the military surgeon who came to see her thought he knew of something better for her than medicine, and he wrote a letter to Sir John Lawrence telling him all about it.

The viceroy was a very great man, and had pressing affairs of state to attend to, for millions of people looked to him as their ruler. But he had a very tender heart, and far away in England he had little girls of his own; so he wrote a reply by the return mail, that the ostrich was at once to be given to its rightful owner, who lost no time in getting well.

Does anybody ask, "How can Aunt Marjorie make a bit of advice out of this little incident?" Well, you know we wrap pills up in sugar; and so we tell stories, and hide lessons within them.

A brave heart is always a tender heart, children. No matter how busy you are, you may, like Sir John Lawrence, take time to do a kind act for some one who is weaker than yourself.

The Real Home.

The real home is in the country; and it is something more than a dwelling; the field and trees around it are part of it, and the views from it of the landscape, and of distant mountains, perhaps, make it unlike any other place in the world. The country home with its fixity of surroundings, has usually some measure of permanence, and the social life formed there is under the favorable conditions of old family associations. Some have the happy condition of living in the home of their fathers, and are surrounded with objects of precious memory, daily mementoes of parental affection and instruction.

The home which it makes is the best thing of farm life. There is a necessity of permanence, and as there is no sudden or great accumulation of wealth, or large increase, the family is free from that discontent which usually comes with sudden or great acquisition. It is one of the compensations of their condition that the farmer's family is in that "fixity of surroundings" which favors their highest culture.—Country Gentleman.

As the train neared Carlton the engineer noticed a single freight car which had been blown on the track ahead of him from a siding. BLACKWELL'S ISLAND.

A Reporter's Visit to New York's Noted Prison—How Convicts are Received.

A Tribune reporter who visited New York's famous penal institution says: To the summer pleasure-seeker who passes up and down the East river, Blackwell's Island appears an attractive spot, its natural charms being too many to be quite spoiled even by its stern and forbidding edifices. A glimpse of several gangs of men, clad in the hideous uniform of State convicts, steadily toiling in the hot sun, under supervision of armed patrolling keepers, presents the initial idea to the gazer of the suffering endured by its population from the hard toil and iron discipline exacted and enforced in that penal institution.

It was early morning, and sixteen newly arrived prisoners were being put through their preliminary exercises in a large chamber on the ground floor, dignified with the style and title of "Reception-Room." At a desk erected in an elevated position, his book recording admissions before him, sat Hall-keeper Michael Kennedy. On the opposite side, ranged in rows, were numerous large baths and three or four chairs, such as barbers invite their clients to be seated in. A gauge for measuring the height of prisoners and a weighing machine completed the list of accessories to the "Reception-Room." Presently a keeper on the outside thrust his arm through the iron bars and, inserting a huge key in the lock, opened the door. Then entered the sixteen sinners in double file and ranged themselves in a row before Keeper Kennedy. "Your name?" shouted that official to the foremost offender. It was given. Then followed in succession the questions, "Your age?" "Native country?" "Religion?" "Occupation?" "Been here before?" and if the answer were in the affirmative, "How many times?" "Under what name or names?" These questions being satisfactorily answered and the replies recorded, the prisoner was handed over to an attendant who measured his height and weighed him, the result of these two operations, together with the color of his hair, eyes and complexion, being quickly added to the statement and spread before Keeper Kennedy. Each man was then made to strip and enter a bath and, under the vigilant eyes of the keeper and his satellites, none failed to escape a thorough washing. This cleansing process completed, each prisoner dressed himself in the suit provided for him by the State which, whatever may be said of its utility, cannot by any stretch of the imagination be considered æsthetic. The clothes belonging to each prisoner were then collected, neatly folded, made into parcels and labeled with the owner's name previous to being put away. Unless a man were sentenced to a very short term and raised an objection to it, he was next shaved, after which he was considered to be duly prepared for the prison life before him. Deputy Warden Osborne rapidly scanned the column headed "Occupation," and assigned every man to some particular keeper's gang; some to work in the quarry, some to the blacksmith's and some to the carpenter's shop. After this all that remained to be done was for Keeper Kennedy to show the prisoners their cells and explain the manner of cleaning them. Then they were marched off, every man to his gang.

The number of prisoners admitted daily varies greatly, but, approximately, it may be said to average ten. At present there are 700 male and 150 female prisoners in the penitentiary, but, although on one occasion—in January, 1878—it accommodated the large number of 1,184, it is much overcrowded, and the system of "doubling up," as putting two prisoners in one cell is termed, is in some cases found to be necessary.

A Forty-Four-Ton Statue.

Probably the most colossal statue yet ordered for the States has just been finished in the plaster form by an American sculptor at Florence, Mr. Larkin G. Mead. There are but two in America that can ever be compared with it, Greenough's "Washington" and his group of "Civilization," which adorn the capitol in Washington. Some idea of it may be obtained by a short description. The subject is the "Mississippi River," a large recumbent statue, not unlike the treatment to the "Nile" group in Rome. The figure is represented leaning against a cluster of rocks whence springs the source of the father of waters, while as a support to the other arm is a broken paddlewheel caught in a snag, a not uncommon sight on that mighty river. At the base are represented in bas-relief the various objects characteristic of the stream during its long course, stern-wheeler and side-wheeler, sugar-cane and crocodile and its mineral wealth in the representation of a lead mine, while negroes are seen loading and unloading bales of cotton and tobacco and the sugar cane; crystals, too, are not forgotten, while the giant right foot rests on a ledge of limestone, and in the right hand stalks of that great product of the Mississippi valley, Indian corn, are held, one mature, the other in the shock. A wreath composed of tobacco and cotton crowns the head of the colossus, while a fishing net is carelessly thrown across the base. The plinth or pedestal is twelve feet in length and the weight of the marble no less than forty-four tons. This is to be presented to the city of New York by Mr. Elliott F. Shepard, a New York lawyer, a son-in-law of W. H. Vanderbilt.—Roman News.

Conscientious Duty.

"I conceive it to be my duty to you and to the public equally,"—wrote Will Lofton Hargrave, Esq., of the Wesleyan Female College, Murfreesboro, N. C., as far back as 1858,—"to state that in a constant family use of Dr. Worthington's Diorrhœa and Cholera Medicine, I have found it of unfailing efficacy. While it is of priceless value in Diarrhœa, Dysentery and Cholera Infantum, it is scarcely, if at all, less efficient in nervous affections generally, and as an adjunct in Fever and Ague," Sold for 25 and 50 cents a bottle.

A QUEEN OF THE STAGE.

"Her Second Love," and the Important Secret She Reveals for the Benefit of Women.

(New York World.)

Several years ago the American public were aroused by the entree upon the stage of a little lady who had been previously but little announced. She was one of an innumerable number of aspirants for public favor and had no instrumentality, aside from her own talents, to cause recognition. In spite of this fact, however, she quickly achieved a warm place in the heart of the public, which she has continued to hold ever since. When it was announced, therefore, that Miss Maud Granger would star the coming season in the play "Her Second Love," written by Mr. John A. Stevens, it was only natural that unusual interest should be manifested not only in theatrical circles, but in other branches of the community. This was specially the case, as it was known that Miss Granger had for the past year, been in excellent lodging domestic health, and the determination to start in a strong emotional play was the more surprising. One of the stars this season was accordingly deputed to see the young lady and verify the rumor of announcements.

Miss Granger's countenance is familiar to nearly everyone in the United States. It is a face once seen never to be forgotten. Features remarkable in their outline and contour are surmounted by a pair of large and deep eyes indicative of the greatest soul power. It is easy to see where Miss Granger obtains the ability to portray characters of the most emotional nature. She possesses within herself the elements of feeling, without which no emotion can be conveyed to an audience. The man of news found the lady at her home in this city, and was accorded a quiet welcome. It was evident at once that she was in greatly improved health, which the expression and color of her countenance both indicated.

"Is it true, Miss Granger, that you contemplate a starring tour the coming season?"

"Yes indeed. My season begins in Chicago on July 16. From there I go to San Francisco, and then play the remainder of the season through the Eastern and Western States."

"Are you confident your health will permit such an undertaking?"

A ringing laugh was the first reply to this question, after which she said:

"Certainly. It is true I have been ill for the past two years, but now I am wholly recovered. Few people can have any idea of the strain a conscientious actress undergoes in essaying an emotional part. It is necessary to put one's whole soul into the work in order to rightly portray the character. This necessitates an utter abandonment of one's personality and an assumption of the character portrayed. If this is an emotional part it is necessary to feel the same emotions the part is supposed to feel. For more than a year I actually cried each night in certain passages of a part I was playing. The audience considered it art. Probably it was, but those were none the less real tears and the effect was none the less trying upon my health."

"But do you anticipate avoiding this in the future?"

"Not in the least. I expect to have just as great a strain as before, but with restored health and a knowledge of how to retain it I do not fear."

"You speak of a 'knowledge of how to retain health.' Will you please explain what you mean by that?"

"You must be aware that women by their very natures are subject to troubles and afflictions unknown to the sterner sex. The name of these troubles is legion, but in whatever form they may come they are weaknesses which interfere with every ambition and hope in life. I believe thousands of noble women are to-day suffering agonies of which even their best friends and relatives know little or nothing, and when I reflect upon it I confess it makes me sad. Now all this misery arises largely from an ignorance of the laws of life or a neglect to carefully observe them. I speak from the depths of a bitter experience in saying this, and I am thankful I know the means of restoration, and how to remain in perfect health."

"Please explain more fully."

"Well, I have found a remedy which seems specially adapted for this very purpose. It is pure and palatable and controls the health and life as, I believe, nothing else will. It is really invaluable and if all the women in America were to use it I am quite sure most of the suffering and many deaths might be avoided."

"What is this wonderful remedy?"

"Warner's Safe Cure."

"And you use it?"

"Constantly."

"And hence believe you will be able to go through the coming season successfully."

"I am quite certain of it."

"A few questions more, Miss Granger. Will you please give me a list of the parts you have created and the plays you have taken part in since your first appearance in public?"

"I first played for some time with the amateurs in New York and Brooklyn. I then went to the Union Square theatre for two seasons, after that to the Boston Globe for one season and then to Boo h's theatre in this city. Next I supported John McCullough and afterwards starred in Juliet, Camille, Rosalind, etc. Subsequently I created the part of Cicely Blaine in the 'Galley Slave' and also starred in 'Two Nights in Rome,' playing the part of Antonia. The past year I have been playing in the 'Planter's Wife' and the coming season, as I have said, will be devoted to 'Her Second Love.'"

As the writer was returning home he fell into a train of musing and wondered if all the women in this land who are suffering could only know Miss Granger's experience and the remarkable results achieved by the pure remedy she used, how much suffering might be avoided and how much happiness secured.
